

Two More Drowned Bodies Discovered

MEDIA ALERT

24 January 2013 - The South African Police Service (SAPS) divers' search and rescue team have discovered two more bodies. An elderly man's body was found in Soekmekaar while the other of a school child was discovered in Giyani.

The Search for missing people in Musina and Makhado continues. This has raised the number of death caused by the floods to twelve (12). MEC Clifford Motsepe as political head of the Provincial Disaster Management Centre expressed his deep sympathy and condolences to affected families. He added, however, that he trust that the Provincial Disaster Management Centre is ready to handle any eventuality. The MEC has edged members of the communities not to cross flowing rivers and streams.

The Team is currently doing an assessment of the damage and will prepare a report for the attention of authorities. The report will advise the Department in terms of what needs to be done. All people reported trapped have been rescued and clean-up operations has commenced.

The department of CoGHSTA has appointed two service providers to start with the process of beneficiary identification and building RDP houses for the affected families with immediate effect. The team is working around the clock to finalize the assessment for qualifying beneficiaries. The Department has also written a request to National Disaster Management Centre for classification of the provincial state of disaster.
